the house is empty.
windows now dark
    will stay that way
for a season.
no one yells down the hall.
there are no stereos blaring,
no conferences in the stairwell.
silence prevails.
my footsteps echo
    in a room
now reverted back to uniformity.
another year over,
and depression and relief
    battle for priority.
such a funny feeling:
frozen on a trapeze,
    waiting for the other one
to swing to you.
i sit and stare,
and my mind
    is as blank
        as the walls.
